Fulbright and the CIA

Why does Sen. William Fulbright want his Foreign Relations Committee given a place in the select group that monitors the CIA? When CIA chief William Raborn was questioned by Fulbright about the spy agency's foreign-policy role, the former admiral balked. Asked if he would reply to the Senate "watchdog" committee (senior senators from the Armed Services and Appropriations Committees), Raborn said he would.

Gas in Vietnam

For the first time, the 1st Infantry Division is testing large-scale air drops of tear gas on Viet Cong jungle strongholds. Dropped by helicopters in 55-gallon drums that explode just below the tree tops, the "riot control agent" sets up a cloud of eye-stinging gas, then settles to the ground. The powdered chemical will continue to react for at least a week.

New Face for State

Despite his current illness (he has hepatitis), Clark Clifford, one of LBJ's favorite trouble-shooters, is No. 1 on the list to replace retiring Under Secretary of State George Ball.
